Monkeypox

Symptoms of monkeypox

The first symptoms of monkeypox are usually:

- Fevers
- Chills
- Muscle aches
- Backache
- Swollen lymph nodes
- Exhaustion.

After a few days, the characteristic rash usually appears on the face and then spreads to other parts of the body. It may also appear on the palms of hands and soles of the feet, inside the mouth, or on the genitalia.

The rash associated with monkeypox involves vesicles or pustules. The number of lesions varies from a few to several thousand.

The symptoms usually resolve by themselves within a few weeks.

What to do if you develop symptoms of monkeypox

If you develop monkeypox symptoms and particularly if you develop a rash along with a fever and swollen lymph nodes you should isolate from others and seek medical care. Wear a mask and call your doctor or nearest hospital to let them know you will be attending. If you have a rash or

What is monkeypox?

Monkeypox is a rare but potentially serious disease that is caused by infection with the monkeypox virus. Monkeypox is endemic in Central and West Africa. When cases are detected outside Africa, they are usually identified in returned travellers who visited endemic areas.

How monkeypox is transmitted

Monkeypox does not spread easily between people.

Person-to-person spread may occur through:

- sexual or intimate contact with an infected person
- contact with clothing or linens (such as bedding or towels) used by an infected person
- direct contact with monkeypox skin lesions or scabs
- respiratory droplets from an individual with monkeypox.

In endemic areas, spread of monkeypox may occur when a person comes into close contact with a wild animal (such as a rodent) infected with the virus or ingests wild game derived from an infected animal.

People with monkeypox are contagious from the time that they develop their first symptoms (which are usually fever, but occasionally starts with a rash) and until rash lesions crust, dry or fall off.

Who is at risk

Monkeypox is typically seen in those who have travelled from a country or region where monkeypox is endemic.

However, in the current outbreak in non-endemic countries, there appears to be transmission in the community, through direct and often intimate contact with someone with monkeypox.

How monkeypox can be prevented

People travelling to endemic countries or region should avoid contact with sick animals (dead or alive) that could harbour monkeypox virus (rodents, marsupials, primates) and should refrain from eating or handling wild game (bush meat).

Staying vigilant with hygiene measures including washing hands with soap and water or alcohol-based sanitiser is important.

Avoid close contact with people with suspected or confirmed monkeypox.

Treatment for monkeypox

Treatment for monkeypox is mainly supportive. The illness is usually mild and recovery usually takes a few weeks.

Monkeypox is a rare but potentially serious disease that is caused by infection with the monkeypox virus. Monkeypox is endemic in Nigeria

On May 26th, 2022, a monkeypox National Emergency Operations Centre (EOC) was activated by the government of Nigeria in response to the risk assessment conducted, which put Nigeria at high risk for a Monkeypox outbreak.
